Intent to Sell Inspection Overview

Many houses in the City of Blue Island were originally built as single-family homes but were converted many years ago to multi-family dwellings. The building codes contained in Chapter 150 of the City Code of Ordinances were implemented to protect residents' health, safety, and welfare by providing minimum requirements for all buildings within the City.

Upon completion of the required Intent to Sell Inspection, which must occur prior to sale of property, any building that does not meet the applicable minimum building code requirements will be fined for code violations. If a converted multi-family dwelling does not meet the minimum standards, the owner will be required to either fix the violations or convert the house back into a single-family home.

Before an Intent to Sell Inspection can be scheduled, property owners must complete and sign this Intent to Sell Inspection Overview and attached Notice. Property owners must also answer the questions below, based on how the property owner is currently using the building. The building inspector will confirm this information during the inspection.

NOTE: The cost of the inspection will be based on the building inspector's determination of how many separate apartments are on the property.

Apartment* means a group of rooms inside a house that could be rented to separate people

Livable* means containing both a kitchen and a bathroom
